

The accounts the big nets miss.

A round little fish in deep ink with one lure-bright eye. Friendly enough for a five-person dental practice, precise enough for a research tool. Two colours, one shape, no gradient.

01 · THE IDEA

Three readings of one mark

A small fish

Your market is small accounts: the practice with five chairs, the eight-lawyer firm. Databases are nets with big holes, and these slip straight through.

Drawn as a lens

The body is a reading glass, and the glint along its belly is the lens catching light. We read every site, sentence by sentence, and cite what we read.

Facing the other way

In the school pattern one fish turns around. That's the account worth writing to, and the whole product exists to point at it.

02 · CONSTRUCTION

A circle, a tail, an eye, a glint

Proportions

1u is the body diameter + 24. The tail is 18u long with a 3u curved notch, and the eye sits up and forward at 45°. The mark is 48 × 32u.

Wordmark

"small fish" in Fraunces SemiBold with the Soft axis at 100 and tracking at -3.5%. Always lowercase, always two words.

Clear space and size

Keep one body radius (12u) clear on every side. The full lockup's minimum is 96 px wide. Below 24 px the glint drops out, and the mark stands alone.

Colour

Deep ink #0E1520 body and a lure #C8F03C eye and glint. On dark grounds it flips: a lure body with ink eye. Lure is never used for text on light grounds.

03 · LOCKUPS

On every ground we use

Primary · white or shallows

Reversed · deep ink

Lure ground · campaigns, stickers

small fish

Stacked · social, merch

04 · APP ICON AND FAVICON

Small, and still a fish

App icon · lure

App icon · ink

64

32

16

Favicons use the reversed mark: a chartreuse fish on ink is the most recognisable thing in a row of browser tabs. At 32 px and below the glint drops out.

05 · PATTERN

The school

Outlined fish in offset rows, and one chartreuse fish swimming the other way. Use it for marketing, onboarding backdrops and empty states. It never sits behind data.

06 · THE FISH IN THE PRODUCT

In the brand, not in the labels

WHERE THE FISH SWIMS

The logo in the sidebar, the app icon and the digest email.

The little fish at the head of a run's progress bar, swimming through the list as it's read.

"Quiet water this week" when monitoring finds nothing, with the school pattern.

Lure chartreuse: once per screen, for the one action that matters, and behind quoted evidence.

WHERE IT DOESN'T

Buttons and navigation stay literal: Export, Watchlist, Runs. No "reel in", "cast a net" or "catch of the day".

Nothing near scores, verdicts or evidence. Data stays plain, so it stays trusted.

No fish emoji, no water gradients, no bubbles or wave dividers.

Never recolour, outline, rotate or add a hook to the mark.

FOUNDATIONS

The accounts the big nets miss.

Databases are big nets: great for big companies, useless for the few thousand small ones your market is made of. Small Fish reads each account's own website, scores it with cited evidence, and keeps watching. The interface exists to make one thing obvious: why an account scored what it did.

01 · PRINCIPLES

Six rules the UI never breaks

Each principle comes straight from the product's own principles in the PRD, turned into a visual rule a designer or engineer can check a screen against.

P1

Evidence is the interface

Every number decomposes on screen into per-dimension bars, and each bar has the sentence it came from and the page it was found on. A score shown alone is a bug.

P2

Pending is a real answer

Pending has its own colour (brass), its own reason codes and a next step. It is never grey, never disabled, never shown as a low score.

P3

The model judges, the arithmetic is ours

Anything computed (scores, weights, counts, deltas) is set in mono. Moving a weight re-ranks instantly and says so: "no credits used".

P4

Stream, never spin

Runs arrive account by account while you watch the pages being read. No full-screen spinners. Runs survive a closed tab, and the UI says so.

P5

It stops at drafted

There is no Send button anywhere in the product. The terminal action is Export, to the sequencer or CRM the team already uses. A human approves every email.

P6

Twelve read well beats six hundred listed

Density is for reading, not scanning. Lists show fewer rows with more reasoning. Top-of-ranking quality is what gets the attention.

02 · TYPOGRAPHY

Three voices

Type tells you who is speaking. The product speaks in sans, the account speaks in serif, and the arithmetic speaks in mono. You can tell a quoted fact from our reasoning without reading a label.

THE PRODUCT SPEAKS

IBM Plex Sans

UI chrome, labels, our explanations, buttons. 400 · 500 · 600.

We qualified 320 of 500. The other 180 did not publish enough to judge.

THE ACCOUNT SPEAKS

Fraunces

03 · COLOUR

Cool paper, deep ink, one lure

A cool grey-white ground and navy-black ink, like a field notebook. Lure chartreuse is the only brand colour, as loud as a fishing lure and used as sparingly: the logo's eye, the one main action, and the marker behind evidence. Verdicts stay muted (kelp, brass, slate) and never decorate.
